I. Organizational matters

A. Membership

1. The General Assembly, in its resolution 43/222 B of 21 December 1988, decided to retain the Committee on Conferences as a permanent subsidiary organ. Pursuant to the provisions of that resolution, in 2002 the Committee was composed of the following Member States: Argentina, Austria, Benin, Chile, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kyrgyzstan, Lithuania, Namibia, Nepal, Peru, the Philippines, the Russian Federation, Sierra Leone, Tunisia and the United States of America.

B. Officers

2. At its organizational session for 2002 (442nd meeting), on 22 March 2002, the Committee elected the following officers to serve in 2002:

Chairman:

Mr. Andrius Namavicius (Lithuania)

Vice-Chairpersons:

Mr. Guillermo E. Kendall (Argentina)

Mr. Thomas Schlesinger (Austria)

Mr. Enrique A. Manalo (Philippines)

Rapporteur:

Ms. Radhia Achouri (Tunisia)

3. At the same meeting, the Committee agreed in principle that the Chairman would undertake informal consultations with a view to determining the composition of its Bureau in 2003.

C. Organization of work

4. Also at its 442nd meeting, the Committee agreed to follow the guidelines adopted in 1994 and 1995 with regard to consideration of intersessional departures from the approved calendar of conferences and to meet as required to review proposals affecting the schedule of conferences and meetings during sessions of the General Assembly.

5. The Committee convened its substantive session on 9, 11 and 13 September 2002 (443rd to 448th meetings).

6. The Under-Secretary-General for General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services addressed the Committee at the opening of its organizational and substantive sessions. At the substantive session, he introduced the report of the Secretary-General on improving the performance of the Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services (A/57/289), submitted in the context of the Secretary-General's comprehensive review of the work of the Organization.

7. The Assistant Secretary-General for General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services addressed the Committee at its substantive session and introduced the report of the Secretary-General on pattern of conferences (A/57/228 and Add.1 and 2), a single report on all matters of a technical nature requested by the General Assembly that replaced what, in previous years, had been several separate reports.

8. Appreciation was expressed during the substantive session of the Committee about the extensive outreach by the senior management of the Department prior to the session to members of the Committee and groups of Member States to introduce and provide insight into the report of the Secretary-General on improving the performance of the Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services. That, to a large extent, had made possible a thorough discussion during the session of the Committee.

D. Programme of work

9. At its organizational session for 2001, held on 19 April, the Committee had requested the Secretariat to submit a draft agenda for 2002 to the Committee at its organizational session for 2002. At the 442nd meeting, on 22 March 2002, the Committee adopted the proposed agenda (A/AC.172/2002/L.1). At the same meeting, the Committee requested the Secretariat to submit a draft agenda for 2003 at the organizational session for 2003.

E. Participation of observers

10. The following States Members of the United Nations were represented as observers: Algeria, Australia, Bangladesh, Belgium, Canada, Croatia, Denmark, the Islamic Republic of Iran, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Portugal, Switzerland and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

11. It was recalled that the Committee had established in 1999 and amended in 2001 the following procedure regarding the participation of observers:

“(c) The observer would be allowed to make one statement on each item on the agenda of the Committee. In addition, the observer would be allowed an opportunity to make a follow-up comment subsequent to receipt of clarifications sought from the Secretariat. The length of the statements by the observer would be limited in accordance with the practices normally followed for the organization of special sessions of the General Assembly.”<sup>1</sup>

II. Calendar of conferences and meetings

A. Matters related to and intersessional departures from the approved calendar for 2002

12. The General Assembly, in its resolution 56/242, approved the draft biennial calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations for 2002-2003, as submitted by the Committee on Conferences and amended by subsequent decisions taken by the Assembly at its fifty-sixth session. The calendar was issued as document A/AC.172/2002/2.

13. At its 373rd meeting, on 26 August 1994, the Committee had decided that requests for intersessional departures submitted to the Committee should in future be reviewed by the Bureau, in consultation with the Secretariat, for subsequent action.

14. At its 379th meeting, on 23 March 1995, the Committee had agreed that proposed changes to the calendar that did not have programme budget implications could be dealt with by the Secretariat, in consultation with the Bureau of the Committee.

15. At its substantive session of 1995, the Committee had decided that requests for intersessional departures submitted to the Committee that involved a change of venue should be referred to the members for approval. Departures that involved other types of changes, as the Committee had decided at its substantive session of 1994, should be reviewed by the Bureau, in consultation with the Secretariat, for subsequent action.

16. The requests submitted in 2002 for changes of venue or additional sessions or meetings and the action taken by the Committee are set out below.

Organ	Request	Action taken
Investments Committee	To meet in Accra on 18 and 19 February 2002 and in conjunction with the meeting of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board in Rome on 9 and 10 July 2002. The Investments Committee usually meets four or five times a year for one day. One of the meetings is held in conjunction with the meetings of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board. The meetings of the Committee are normally held in New York except for the meeting with the Pension Board, which is held wherever the Board convenes, as indicated in document A/49/212, paragraph 70. It has been the tradition for a member of the Investments Committee to host one of its meetings. All expenses are always met by the host at no cost to the United Nations and, as confirmed by the Secretary of the Committee, all expenses incurred in connection with the Investments Committee meetings on 18 and 19 February in Accra are covered by the host country in accordance with past practice, as indicated in document A/49/212, paragraph 71.	Request approved

Organ	Request	Action taken
Preparatory Committee for the International Conference on Financing for Development	To hold an additional meeting of the Preparatory Committee, subject to the availability of services, on an exceptional basis, in order to adopt the outcome document "Monterrey Consensus" and transmit it to the Conference, and to approve the report of the fourth session of the Preparatory Committee.	Request approved
United Nations Forum on Forests	To convene its second session from 4 to 15 March in New York rather than San Jose, Costa Rica. In its resolution 2001/292, the Economic and Social Council welcomed the offer of the Government of Costa Rica to host this meeting. The Government of Costa Rica, however, informed the Under-Secretary-General for Economic and Social Affairs on 28 January 2002 that, owing to unforeseen circumstances, it was withdrawing its offer to host the Forum. The Bureau of the Forum, at its meeting on 28 January 2002, decided to hold the session at Forum headquarters in New York from 4 to 15 March 2002.	Request approved
Commission on the Status of Women	To hold one additional meeting of the Commission on 25 March 2002 to take action on two more proposals and to finish its work.	Request approved
Fifth Committee	To maintain the four-week duration of its second resumed session, as originally approved in the draft calendar of conferences and meetings, owing to the programme of work of the Committee. Since it was not possible to schedule the four weeks in succession because of the General Assembly special session on children (8-10 May 2002), Conference Services and the Fifth Committee secretariat agreed on the dates of 29 April to 2 May and 13 to 31 May 2002.  To hold one additional informal meeting of the Committee on 6 June 2002 and a formal meeting on 17 June 2002 to take action on the draft proposals before it and to conclude its work for the session.	Requests approved
Group of Governmental Experts on Tracing Small Arms and Light Weapons	To convene its first session in Geneva from 1 to 5 July 2002 rather than in New York from 20 to 24 May 2002. Since some members of the Group would participate in the Open-ended Group of Governmental Experts of States Parties to the Convention on Certain Conventional Weapons, scheduled to meet in Geneva from 20 to 24 May 2002, it would be impossible for them also to attend the meeting in New York. Moreover, moving the meeting from New York to Geneva would reduce the cost of holding the meeting owing to the lower cost of travel for some of the experts. Conference Services in Geneva confirmed that it could accommodate the meeting on the dates requested in July.	Request approved

Organ	Request	Action taken
Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters	To convene the thirty-ninth session of the Board from 17 to 19 July 2002 in Geneva rather than in New York in order to give members the opportunity to confer with participants in the Conference on Disarmament. Moreover, since the Board also serves as the Board of Trustees of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research, the Geneva venue permits Board members to be in close contact with the staff of the Institute.	Request approved

B. Adoption of the draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings for 2003

Introduction and overview

17. At its 443rd and 444th meetings, on 9 September 2002, the Committee on Conferences reviewed the draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings for 2003 (A/57/228/Add.1 and 2).

Discussion

18. The view was expressed that integrated management of the calendar of conferences across duty stations was an area of great potential for streamlining. In preparing the calendar for 2004-2005, the Secretariat could be more proactive in scheduling meetings outside the parallel peak periods and, if necessary, could call upon the Committee for a decision.

19. Attention was drawn to the fact that, in addition to meetings financed from the regular budget, the calendar included meetings for which conference services were provided on a reimbursable basis and others for which the programme budget implications had not yet been reviewed by the Fifth Committee and approved by the General Assembly. It would be helpful for the Committee to be able to distinguish those categories when reviewing the calendar.

Conclusions and recommendations

20. The Committee on Conferences recommended to the General Assembly that it should:

(a) Adopt the draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings for 2003, taking into account the various observations of the Committee and on the understanding that the budgetary implications of certain items, appropriately identified in the draft revised calendar, such as decisions and recommendations of the Economic and Social Council adopted at its 2002 substantive session and included in the calendar, would be reviewed by the appropriate legislative bodies;

(b) Authorize the Committee to make any adjustments to the calendar of conferences and meetings for 2003 that might become necessary as a result of actions and decisions taken by the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session.

21. The Committee noted with satisfaction that, in drafting the revised calendar of conferences and meetings for 2003, the Secretariat had taken into account the arrangements referred to in General Assembly resolutions 54/248, 55/222 and 56/242 concerning Orthodox Good Friday on 25 April 2003.

22. The Committee requested the Secretariat, when issuing the draft revised calendar for 2003 and future calendars, to identify the source of funding for each item and to note clearly those treaty bodies for which exceptions had been made to be funded from the regular budget.

23. The Committee invited the Secretary-General, when drafting the biennial calendar of conferences and meetings for 2004-2005, to submit, as appropriate, proposals aimed at further avoiding peak periods at the various duty stations.

C. Improved utilization of conference-servicing resources and facilities

1. Meeting statistics of United Nations organs and consultations with/letters to bodies concerning utilization of the conference services available to them

Introduction and overview

24. At its 443rd meeting, on 9 September 2002, the Committee on Conferences reviewed statistical data contained in the report of the Secretary-General (A/57/228 and Add.1 and 2) on the planned and actual utilization of conference resources allocated to a core sample of bodies that had met in New York, Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi in 2001. The data included compliance and availability indices for assessing compliance with the submission deadlines for pre-session documentation and availability thereof.

25. In introducing the report, the Assistant Secretary-General for General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services made several cross-references to the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Improving the performance of the Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services" (A/57/289), which addressed documentation-related matters and policies.

26. Also at its 443rd meeting, the Committee considered an oral report by the Chairman on consultations with bodies concerning the utilization of the conference services available to them.

27. In keeping with section II, paragraph 16, of General Assembly resolution 56/242, the Chairman of the Committee reported that he had sent letters to 11 intergovernmental bodies identified as having consistently utilized less than the applicable benchmark figure of their allocated resources during their previous three sessions and had held consultations with their chairpersons and secretaries in an effort to find new and innovative ways of harmonizing the factors of efficiency and the rational use of conference resources.

28. In most cases, the main factor in a low utilization rate was the time lost owing to late starting and/or early ending of meetings. Some chairpersons had expressed dissatisfaction with the methodology of calculating the utilization factor on the grounds that it focused only on the utilization of conference resources while ignoring the ultimate goal of the organs, which was to conduct and finish their business successfully. It was also argued that the methodology was too mechanical for the nature of the mandates of some bodies. However, while the mandates of intergovernmental bodies could not be ignored, the mandate given by the General Assembly to the Committee on Conferences was to oversee the utilization of conference services and, in that regard, the methodology for calculating the utilization factor had served a valuable purpose thus far.

29. Some of the ways in which conference services could be used efficiently by the bodies concerned included: improving the accuracy of advanced planning of the number of fully serviced meetings; opening meetings on time, even without a quorum, if necessary, and discussing other items or holding informal consultations if time remained; avoiding cancellations of meetings or cancelling them well in advance; maximizing the option of scheduling informal consultations with interpretation services; and raising awareness among the membership about the underutilization factors, bearing in mind the discontinuation of night and weekend meetings.

Discussion

30. Concern was expressed about the loss of valuable conference resources as a result of late starts, early endings and cancellations of meetings. Unused resources could have been released instead for meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States. Members remarked that the underutilization of resources was the result of poor planning, as some committees had a pattern of wasting significant amounts of their allotted time year after year, which seemed to suggest that their allocations were too high.

31. It was explained that the standard three-hour blocks in which interpretation services were provided made it difficult to schedule meetings of shorter duration. The three-hour blocks facilitated the reallocation of whole unused blocks; however, such reallocation required close cooperation of the bureaux and secretariats of bodies.

32. It was also explained that chairpersons of the Committee on Conferences had been holding consultations with intergovernmental bodies year after year on the utilization of the conference services available to them and that very little had been achieved. Certain bodies seemed to lack the will to cooperate and the arguments they advanced were not convincing. It was time for stricter measures and action, including warning those bodies that their entitlements might be cut.

33. It was suggested that the Committee should identify the main drivers of the shortfall and tailor specific recommendations to those bodies, since heavy users of conference services had a greater impact on the overall utilization rate.

Conclusions and recommendations

34. The Committee on Conferences noted with deep concern that the overall utilization factor at the four duty stations in 2001 had dropped six points below the benchmark of 80 per cent, with a 14 per cent drop in New York, which accounted for the overall decrease. The equivalent of 307 meetings, 921 hours, had not been utilized in 2001, even though the total number of meetings held at those duty stations had been 300 fewer than in 2000.

35. The Committee concluded that the loss of resources was unacceptable. As a first step, meeting planners had examined the reasons for the loss of utilization and the Chairman of the Committee had conducted consultations with the chairpersons of bodies that had been underutilizing their resources for three years in a row. The secretariats and bureaux of those bodies had been urged to consider changes to their programme of work and to introduce discipline in the way they conducted their business. They had also been requested to work more closely with conference services and to adjust their programme of work based on previous patterns for recurring agenda items with a view to reducing waste.

36. With regard to changes to the methodology, the Committee considered that the utilization factor (UF) was a complex index that incorporated all the aspects of the meeting ratio (MR) and the planning accuracy factor (PAF) and included utilization of meeting time as a factor as well. It was therefore clearly superior as an overall measurement of utilization to both the MR and the PAF and should thus be kept as the primary index by which utilization performance of intergovernmental bodies was judged.

37. The Committee noted the explanation given by some committees that early endings of meetings could be considered a sign of efficiency and stressed that better planning and flexible adjustment of the programme of work were the best way to reduce time lost owing to late starts and early endings of meetings.

38. The Committee welcomed the fact that, in a number of cases, the Chairman's consultations with bodies had had a positive impact on the rational and efficient utilization of conference-servicing resources and requested the Chairman to continue to consult on its behalf with the chairpersons of bodies that had consistently utilized less than the applicable benchmark figure of their allocated resources during the previous three sessions, with a view to making appropriate recommendations in order to achieve the optimum utilization of conference-servicing resources.

39. The Committee welcomed proposals to improve the utilization of those bodies that failed to reach the benchmark figure. The proposals included setting well-defined and achievable objectives for utilization of allocated resources at the organizational meeting of those bodies, such as establishing a higher minimum number of speakers before scheduling a meeting, voting on items in blocks, having back-up agenda items for their daily programme of work, and planning, at the end of a session, the programme of work for the following session. In that context, the Committee invited further proposals.

40. The Committee concluded that, should there be no improvement in the utilization statistics of the most consistent underutilizers, it would consider further steps to remedy the situation and make recommendations thereon to the General Assembly.

2. Provision of interpretation services to meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States

Introduction and overview

41. In section II, paragraph 18, of its resolution 56/242, the General Assembly decided to include all necessary resources in the budget for the biennium 2002-2003 to provide interpretation services for meetings of regional and other major groupings of

Member States upon request by those groups, on an ad hoc basis, in accordance with established practice, and requested the Secretary-General to submit to the Assembly at its fifty-seventh session, through the Committee on Conferences, a report on the implementation of that decision.

42. The statistical data and analysis, submitted pursuant to the aforementioned request, dealt with meetings of regional and other major groupings, including a breakdown by regional group. The report covered the period from July 2001 to April 2002 in order to ensure timely issuance of the report, in compliance with the six-week rule.

43. At its 443rd meeting, on 9 September 2002, the Committee on Conferences considered the report of the Secretary-General on the provision of interpretation services to meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States contained in section II.B (3) of the consolidated report on pattern of conferences (A/57/228 and Add.1 and 2).

Discussion

44. Satisfaction was expressed about the increase in the percentage of meetings held by regional and other major groupings that had been provided with interpretation services during the period from July 2001 to April 2002. It was also noted with satisfaction that, overall, for all four duty stations, 98 per cent of requests for interpretation services had been met.

45. Concern was expressed, however, about the narrative of the conclusion contained in paragraph 34 of the report, which dealt with the provision of budgetary resources for interpretation services. Budgetary recommendations were within the purview of the Fifth Committee, not of the Committee on Conferences.

Conclusions and recommendations

46. The Committee on Conferences recalled that meetings held by regional and other major groupings of Member States were provided with interpretation services on an ad hoc basis, in accordance with established practice.

47. The Committee noted with appreciation that the percentage of requests met for meetings with interpretation in New York by regional and other major groupings of Member States had continued to increase, from 92 per cent during the period 2000-2001 to 97 per cent during the period from July 2001 to April 2002, and that overall, for the four duty stations, 98 per cent of the requests had been met. It encouraged the Secretariat to maintain that positive trend.

3. Improved utilization of conference-servicing resources and facilities

(a) United Nations Office at Nairobi

Introduction and overview

48. At its 444th meeting, on 9 September 2002, the Committee on Conferences was informed that a report on the facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi would be submitted as an addendum to document A/57/228.

49. At its 445th meeting, on 11 September 2002, the Acting Chief of Conference Services at Nairobi participated in a videoconference arranged by the Committee on Conferences, in which he orally reported on the utilization of conference facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi and possible improvement thereof.

Discussion

50. The Secretariat informed the Committee that as a result of the establishment of a permanent interpretation service at Nairobi, the number of meetings at which interpretation services had been provided had increased by 23.5 per cent in 2001 and the number of events held by 10 per cent. The severe constraint of adequate facilities posed a serious challenge for any further increase in utilization.

Conclusions and recommendations

51. The Committee on Conferences welcomed the efforts that had been made during the previous year to improve the utilization of conference services at the United Nations Office at Nairobi, but expressed regret that a written report on the subject had not been made available for consideration.

(b) United Nations Centre in Bangkok

Introduction and overview

52. At its 444th meeting, on 9 September 2002, the Committee on Conferences considered the report on the utilization of the United Nations Centre in Bangkok contained in paragraphs 36 to 49 of the report of the Secretary-General on pattern of conferences (A/57/228).

Conclusions and recommendations

53. The Committee on Conferences welcomed the marked increase in the number of events organized at the United Nations Centre in Bangkok over that of previous years and the projection that in 2002 an even greater number of events would be organized in Bangkok.

4. Improving the performance of the Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services

Introduction and overview

54. At its 443rd and 444th meetings, on 9 September 2002, the Committee on Conferences considered the report of the Secretary-General on improving the performance of the Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services (A/57/289). In introducing the report, the Under-Secretary-General for General Assembly and Conference Management said that the bold, creative ideas set forth in the report were part of the comprehensive new round of reform for a rejuvenated Secretariat and represented the Department's efforts to change its culture as well as its structure. It intended to become proactive, staying on top of events rather than being at their mercy, through upstream planning, and to operate as an integral whole to achieve full-system benefits, making good use of technological advances. The Department aimed at cost-neutral reform, with redeployment of resources where they would produce the greatest value.

Discussion

Repositioning the Department

55. The view was expressed that the creative and forward-looking proposals contained in the report could significantly change the situation. The frank self-criticism contained in the report and the evident determination of the Secretariat to address the problems identified were commended. So far, the analysis and reforms related primarily to Headquarters.

The exercise should be extended to other duty stations, in part to realize the benefits of integrated planning of meetings. The development of instruments and indicators to measure progress would also assist the Committee. The Committee's task was not to micromanage or to second-guess the Secretary-General, but to monitor results.

56. Support was expressed for the proposed forward-planning arrangements with the President of the General Assembly and committee chairpersons. The view was also expressed that the proactive role of the Secretariat should not interfere with the work of the legislative bodies.

57. Support was expressed for the idea of making editorial support available at an early stage. However, reservations were expressed both as to its consequences and as to its practical implementation. In response to questions about the proposals for restructuring editorial services, it was explained that the concept of pre-editing had three applications. First, it would be useful if the editors could work with author departments at an early stage. Secondly, for the sake of the efficiency of the whole system, documents should be edited prior to rather than parallel with translation. Thirdly, the task of editing to ensure concordance between language versions of resolutions would be much better done before adoption rather than after, as in the current system, which would require more editorial help to Member States during the informal consultations stage.

58. In response to queries about the rationale for the integration of the technical-servicing secretariats of the Fifth and Sixth Committees into the Department, it was explained that, in the earlier years of the Organization, technical-servicing secretariat support had been provided from the substantive departments. However, in the first round of reforms, the Secretary-General had decided that the function of a committee secretary was more akin to conference servicing than to substantive support. Consequently, in 1997, the technical-servicing secretariats of all Main Committees except the Fifth and Sixth had been transferred to the Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services. The experiment had proved successful and therefore the decision had been taken to integrate the remaining two secretariats. Since the staff member serving as Secretary of the Sixth Committee had been performing both technical servicing and substantive functions, the technical-servicing secretariat function would have to be separated out for integration into the Department. The Secretary-General had the authority to restructure and regroup the Secretariat, but to the extent that those actions had an impact on the proposed programme budget, the General Assembly had the right of review.

59. The view was expressed that the new name, Department for General Assembly and Conference Management, was somewhat misleading, since it implied a greater authority than the Department actually had. "Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services Management" would be preferable. The view was also expressed that determining the name of the Department was within the purview of the Secretary-General.

Pursuing full-system benefits

60. The view was expressed that the approach taken towards achieving full-system benefits was a demonstration of leadership. The analysis should be expanded to other duty stations. In response to questions, it was explained that, at some point in the past, library services in New York had been transferred to the Department of Public Information, but at other duty stations they had remained part of conference services. What was found to work for New York was not always appropriate for Geneva, Vienna or Nairobi.

Integrating global management

61. At its 445th meeting, on 11 September 2002, the Committee arranged a videoconference on the topic of integrating global management, in which the Director of the Conference Services Division at Geneva, the Acting Chief of Conference Services at Nairobi and the Chief of Conference Services at Vienna participated. The Under-Secretary-General for General Assembly and Conference Management, introducing the participants, explained that, although the Department had always placed great emphasis on coordination, recently, interaction among duty stations had been greatly stepped up, both at the policy level, through videoconferencing and management retreats, and at the operational level, through nearly daily consultations. Nevertheless, more could certainly be done. The Committee was provided with statistics on vacancy rates at all duty stations.

62. The Committee then engaged in a question-and-answer session on the item with the representatives of the other duty stations, with specific emphasis on electronic management tools and systems for global management, customized information technology support and distance translation.

63. In the light of the statement in paragraph 33 of the report (A/57/289) that the understanding of the Department's leadership role varied from duty station to duty station, some delegations questioned whether too much centralization might result in a lack of flexibility. It was explained that global management entailed not so much centralization as harmonization and consultation. Some members stressed the importance of extending the analysis and reform process to other duty stations. The Secretariat explained that the Department wished to follow the principle of subsidiarity, that is, to exercise policy leadership and ensure consistency in approaches, practices and principles, without interfering in the operational responsibility of the other duty stations.

64. In terms of specifics, the need to harmonize document-tracking systems and to profit from best practices was stressed, wherever developed. The Department should see to it that all duty stations were provided with adequate customized information technology support.

Alleviating the documentation situation

65. The view was expressed that a solution must be found to the problem of summary records which were being issued months and even years after a meeting was held and were thus of little value to Member States. It was a problem for both Member States and managers of the Department. The view was expressed that consideration could be given to the discontinuance of summary records. Notwithstanding this, the view was also expressed that summary records provided a useful tool to Member States. It was suggested that the translators currently assigned to the production of summary records could be reassigned to more urgent translation tasks and their summary record functions assigned to other staff of the Department. The report of the Secretary-General proposed as an alternative that digital recordings could be made of meetings, which could then be stored in a searchable online database. Members cautioned that a digital recording would not provide the synthesis that a summary record provided and that the element of analysis could not easily be replaced. The question should also be asked whether the institutional memory of the Organization could be better preserved by using the current methods or by using new, electronic means of storing information.

66. The question was raised as to why verbatim records had not been included in the review by the Department and whether their continued production did not also constitute a waste of resources. It was explained, however, that the production of verbatim records was required by the rules of procedure of both the General Assembly and the Security Council and that it was not within the competence of the Secretariat to recommend their discontinuance. In any event, the production of verbatim records of the Security Council was not subject to the same delays as summary records and they were in fact a useful aid to members of the Security Council.

67. It was also explained that the proposals concerning documentation that had been made were intended for implementation in New York in the first instance. If they proved successful, they could then be extended to other duty stations. It was recognized that Headquarters could learn from the best practices at other duty stations as well. The hope was expressed that all of the proposed reforms would be carried out on a cost-neutral basis.

Optimizing the use of technology

68. This item is considered in chapter V of the present report, entitled "Information technology".

Measuring productivity with the current workload standards

Discussion

69. The view was expressed that, while the current workload standards for translators, interpreters and text processors were inadequate — insofar as they measured only quantitative outputs and failed to take into account the quality of the work accomplished, the level of difficulty of the work, and other assignments such as reading background documents, learning new technologies and drafting summary records — some tool of measurement was needed for planning and budgeting purposes and in order to monitor performance.

70. The recently introduced system of results-based budgeting should offer novel ways of measuring the output of the Department. While the work done by translators and interpreters is clearly "intellectual work", it should still be subject to workload standards. It was explained, however, that the Department was not suggesting that workload standards be eliminated for translators and interpreters. It merely sought recognition of the highly complex and intellectual nature of the work performed and questioned whether output should be judged by purely mechanical means such as counting the number of words translated. More complex tools of measurement were needed that would allow for a richer appreciation of what those jobs entailed and programme managers should play a greater role in assessing productivity.

71. Attention was drawn to the potential impact of technological innovations, including computer-assisted translation, voice recognition and voice recording, on the productivity of translators and text processors. While some organizations had already been consulted, it might be useful to consult with a broader range of organizations that employed the services of translators, interpreters and text processors in order to exchange experiences and identify best practices with a view to determining the cost-effectiveness of the services provided.

72. It was explained that the current workload standards for interpreters had been established in negotiations with the International Association of Conference Interpreters and it might therefore be inappropriate to request the Department even to explore the possibility of changing those standards while that agreement remained in force. The most reliable indicator of the quality of interpreters' output was the feedback received from members of the bodies that were consumers of the services provided.

Streamlining the structure of the Department

73. The Committee took note of the measures that the Department had introduced to streamline its structure, namely, making information technology a strategic asset, strengthening the documentation function, grouping meeting support functions, strengthening and integrating editorial support functions and merging the reproduction and distribution functions.

74. It was noted that the streamlining of its structure and the changing of its name were within the exclusive purview of the Department and that the Committee on Conferences should merely take note of the developments.

75. The hope was expressed that conference-servicing departments at other duty stations would take similar steps to streamline their structure.

Conclusions and recommendations

76. The Committee on Conferences commended the Secretary-General for the frank analysis of the operations of the Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services and welcomed the creative solutions put forward and the intention of the Secretary-General to implement without delay the measures falling under his authority as chief administrative officer of the Organization, taking into account the specificities of each duty station.

77. The Committee recommended further consideration of the integrated global management, as referred to in document A/57/289, with due regard to administrative and financial matters.

78. The Committee welcomed the intention of the Secretary-General to develop, as soon as possible, and with the advice and support of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, an implementation plan for the envisaged improvements and trusted that the plan would include progress indicators. The Committee requested that it be apprised on a regular basis of the progress made.

79. The Committee noted the intention to integrate the functions of the technical-servicing secretariats of the Fifth and Sixth Committees into the Department and that the programmatic and financial consequences would be considered by the appropriate bodies of the General Assembly.

80. The Committee requested the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly as soon as possible but no later than at its fifty-eighth session on possible alternative ways of addressing the issue of summary records.

81. The Committee welcomed the intention of the Secretary-General to improve the current situation of late submission and issuance of documents with the implementation of the new slotting system, in order to comply more effectively with the existing rules on submission and issuance of documentation.

82. The Committee recognized the need to update existing workload standards so as to reflect, inter alia, functions performed by language staff not currently included and the impact of technological innovations.

83. The Committee also recognized the need to develop, where feasible, workload standards for those occupational groups of language services for which there were currently no such standards.

84. The Committee emphasized the potential importance of workload standards for assessing productivity and requested the Secretary-General to update the standards, taking into account the best practices and experience of other bodies and organizations engaged in analogous work and drawing on expert advice, as needed.

85. The Committee further emphasized that, in the light of the complex intellectual nature of the language services, the functions performed could not be evaluated exclusively by workload standards. It therefore invited the Secretary-General to develop further performance indicators in order to evaluate the quality of the functions performed.

86. The Committee requested the Secretary-General to report, as a follow-up to document A/57/289, on how the reform initiative would involve the other major duty stations, taking into account their specificities and operational responsibilities.

87. The Committee requested the Secretary-General, when further developing electronic tools in the context of management and conference servicing, to combine and utilize operational systems already in place so as to avoid duplication.

88. The Committee requested the Secretary-General to provide adequate specialized information technology support for all major duty stations.

D. Requests for exceptions to section I, paragraph 7, of General Assembly resolution 40/243

Introduction and overview

89. At its 443rd meeting, on 9 September 2002, the Committee on Conferences considered the report of the Secretary-General on pattern of conferences (A/57/228), chapter II, section C, and annex III, concerning requests from subsidiary bodies for exceptions to be made to section I, paragraph 7, of General Assembly resolution 40/243, in which the Assembly decided that no subsidiary organ of the General Assembly would be permitted to meet at United Nations Headquarters during a regular session of the Assembly unless explicitly authorized by the Assembly. Statistical information was also provided on the number of meetings, if any, that the bodies concerned had held during the fifty-sixth session of the Assembly and the efficiency with which they had utilized the resources made available to them. In addition to the bodies listed in the annex, the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples had requested permission to meet on 17 and 18 September 2002 in order to consider the report on the visit to Tokelau at the invitation of the Government of New Zealand.

Discussion

90. Delegations expressed the view that bodies that had a record of considerable lost meeting time should be more specific about their needs and should not be given blanket approval. Moreover, the Committee's concerns about lost meeting time should be communicated to the bodies concerned. It was explained that scheduling was more flexible when only the number of meetings was anticipated and specific dates were not set. Details of the specific needs were elicited through consultation following approval. Provision of conference services was not guaranteed, but depended on available capacity.

Conclusions and recommendations

91. The Committee on Conferences endorsed the report of the Secretary-General on pattern of conferences (A/57/228), chapter II, section C, and annex III, as orally amended. It was understood that all such meetings would be allocated conference services on an as-available basis, from within existing resources, in such a way that the work of the General Assembly and its Main Committees was not impeded.

92. The Committee requested the Secretariat to communicate to those bodies with particularly low utilization rates their past utilization figures so as to impress upon them the need to avoid wastage of conference services.

III. Documentation- and publication-related matters

A. Submission of documentation

Introduction and overview

93. The General Assembly, in section III, paragraphs 10 and 11, of its resolution 56/242, requested the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive report to the Assembly at its fifty-seventh session on measures taken to ensure full implementation of the report on measures taken by the Secretariat to strengthen responsibility and accountability in the submission of documentation (A/56/300) and to develop an effective accountability and responsibility system within the Secretariat in order to ensure timely submission of documents for processing, and to report thereon, through the Committee on Conferences, to the Assembly at its fifty-seventh session.

94. At its 445th meeting, on 11 September 2002, the Committee on Conferences considered the report on the submission of documentation contained in the consolidated report of the Secretary-General on pattern of conferences (A/57/228, paras. 55-70).

Discussion

95. In the context of the report of the Secretary-General on improving the performance of the Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services (A/57/289), it was explained that the Secretariat as a whole bore responsibility for seeking to improve the documentation situation within the area of its authority as Member States did within theirs. In general, the practice of accommodating time-sensitive late submissions over submissions made in accordance with the rules needed to be adjusted. The proposed slotting system for report processing should reverse that pattern, which gave few incentives to early submitters.

B. Distribution of documentation

Introduction and overview

96. In section III, paragraph 5, of its resolution 55/222, the General Assembly decided that there should not be any exemption to the rule that documents must be distributed in all official languages and emphasized the principle that all documents must be distributed simultaneously in all official languages before they were made available on United Nations web sites.

97. In section III, paragraph 3, of its resolution 56/242, the General Assembly deeply regretted the failure of author departments to abide by section III, paragraph 5, of its resolution 55/222 and requested the Secretary-General to take corrective measures to ensure the full implementation of that provision and to report thereon to the Assembly in the first part of its resumed fifty-sixth session.

98. At its 445th meeting, on 11 September 2002, the Committee on Conferences considered the note by the Secretary-General on simultaneous availability of parliamentary documentation in the six official languages on the United Nations web site (A/C.5/56/37).

Conclusions and recommendations

99. The Committee on Conferences took note of the corrective measures taken by the Secretary-General with regard to making documents available on United Nations web sites before they had been distributed simultaneously in all official languages.

C. Compliance with the regulations concerning page limits

Introduction and overview

100. In its resolution 53/208 B, the General Assembly stressed the need for compliance with existing page limits for documents and requested the Secretary-General to submit to the Committee on Conferences, every two years, updated information on the number and length of documents. The Secretary-General instructed the Under-Secretary-General for General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services not to accept for processing drafts of reports that exceeded the 16-page limit for all reports originating in the Secretariat. Waivers to the page limits would only be granted in exceptional circumstances.

101. At its 445th meeting, on 11 September 2002, the Committee on Conferences considered the report on compliance with the regulations concerning page limits contained in the consolidated report of the Secretary-

General on pattern of conferences (A/57/228, paras. 72-86).

Discussion

102. In the context of the report of the Secretary-General on improving the performance of the Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services (A/57/289), the Committee reviewed developments concerning documentation policy and the efforts being made by the Secretariat to encourage author departments to reduce the length of their submissions while maintaining high standards of quality.

Conclusions and recommendations

103. The Committee on Conferences noted that, although the number and proportion of documents issued in accordance with the established and desirable page limits had increased, compliance with the limitation targets for both intergovernmental and Secretariat documents continued to be partial.

104. The Committee also noted that documents which were significantly in excess of the page limit, especially when submitted late, created an additional burden for the processing services and could jeopardize their timely issuance and compromise their quality.

105. The Committee recommended that page limits should be rigorously enforced, as indicated in the report of the Secretary-General on improving the performance of the Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services (A/57/289).

D. Issuance of all documents and publications of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia in Arabic and in other working languages of the Commission

Introduction and overview

106. In part III, paragraph 17, of its resolution 56/242 and in paragraph 124 of its resolution 56/253, the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to ensure fully the issuance of all documents and publications of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA) in Arabic, which was most relevant to the requirements of the Member States of the region, as well as in the other working languages of the Commission, to meet the requirements of readers outside the region, as appropriate, and to report thereon to the Assembly by its fifty-seventh session.

107. In its resolution 56/277, the General Assembly urged ESCWA to comply with all relevant provisions of Commission resolution 44 (IV), whereby it decided that all documents to be submitted to it should, as far as possible, be drafted in Arabic. In addition, it took note of the note by the Secretariat in document A/C.5/56/19 and looked forward to the report of the Secretary-General on the progress achieved in the production of documents and publications in Arabic.

108. At its 445th meeting, on 11 September 2002, the Committee on Conferences considered the report of the Secretary-General on issuance of all documents and publications of ESCWA in Arabic and in other working languages of the Commission contained in the consolidated report of the Secretary-General on pattern of conferences (A/57/228, paras. 87-92).

Discussion

109. Note was taken of the remedial measures that had been introduced in 2002 to improve the situation and of the current situation in ESCWA regarding languages used in the preparation of ESCWA documents and publications.

Conclusions and recommendations

110. The Committee on Conferences welcomed the promising trend so far and the stated intention of ESCWA to increase the percentage of documents available in Arabic from 47 per cent in 2000-2001 to 80 per cent in 2002-2003 and 100 per cent in 2004-2005.

IV. Translation- and interpretation-related matters

A. Use of remote interpretation

Introduction and overview

111. In paragraph 108 of its report to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session,<sup>2</sup> the Committee on Conferences requested the Secretariat to assess future advances in the videoconferencing and communications areas to determine whether they could offer solutions to the outstanding technical problems of remote interpretation. In paragraph 109, it also requested that a report on developments in those areas, as well as any activities in the field of remote interpretation carried out by other international organizations, be submitted to the Assembly at its fifty-seventh session.

112. At its 445th meeting, on 11 September 2002, the Committee on Conferences considered the report of the Secretary-General on videoconferencing and remote interpretation contained in the consolidated report of the Secretary-General on pattern of conferences (A/57/228, paras. 93-105).

Discussion

113. Note was taken of the outstanding problems related to remote interpretation, including image interruptions and the lack of synchronization between sound and image in integrated services digital network (ISDN) transmissions. While members expressed satisfaction with the quality of the sound and images during the videoconference held earlier in the meeting with duty stations away from Headquarters, videoconferencing did not offer technical solutions to the technical problems of remote interpretation. As a concept, however, remote interpretation remained on the table, although it was still not part of the general picture in international organizations.

114. The view was expressed that the issue of remote interpretation should be examined in the context of a comprehensive study that would assess the impact of the introduction of new technologies on the working conditions of interpreters, including their ability to interact with speakers.

Conclusions and recommendations

115. The Committee on Conferences noted that, while problems related to the transmission quality of a point-to-point or point-to-multipoint communications link remained, it was likely that in two or three years, the current, less expensive, routinely used ISDN-based videoconferencing technology would be able to solve them and that the remaining problems related to image quality would also be solved.

116. The Committee looked forward to the results of the comprehensive cost-benefit analysis on the use of remote interpretation, which would be finalized when information regarding the impact of remote interpretation on the working conditions of interpreters was obtained, together with an evaluation of its impact on the quality of the services provided by the interpreters of the Organization.

B. Utilization of new technologies

117. This item is considered in chapter V of the present report, entitled "Information technology".

C. Language service posts

1. Temporary assistance posts

118. The Committee was informed that a report would be issued on the conversion of some temporary assistance posts under the agenda item entitled "Programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003".

2. Employment of retirees

119. The Committee was informed that updated information on the subject had been requested under the agenda item entitled "Human resources management".

3. Employment of interpreters with desired language combinations

Introduction and overview

120. In section IV, paragraph 3, of its resolution 56/242, the General Assembly decided to approve, for an initial period of one year, an internal training initiative targeting near-successful candidates in the interpreters' competitive examination who were close to performing at the requisite level but needed additional training.

121. At its 445th meeting, on 11 September 2002, the Committee on Conferences considered the report of the Secretary-General concerning the employment of interpreters with desired language combinations contained in the consolidated report of the Secretary-General on pattern of conferences (A/57/228, paras. 109-117).

Discussion

122. It was recalled that, in 2001, the Committee had supported the training initiative that had been proposed to improve the staffing situation in terms of certain language combinations in the Interpretation Service. Over the long term, it would be less costly to train candidates who could then fill vacant posts than to have recourse to temporary assistance. The whole question of the competitiveness of the Organization's remuneration package should also be examined, since remuneration must be attractive in order to attract qualified candidates. It was noted in that connection that the Organization did not observe the Noblemaire principle, according to which the salaries of international civil servants should be based on those of the comparator civil service.

Conclusions and recommendations

123. The Committee on Conferences noted with satisfaction the results of the first training exercise, which had taken place in 2001, and supported the continuation of the initiative in a flexible manner.

124. The Committee also noted with satisfaction that it had been possible in the current biennium to implement the programme within existing resources.

V. Information technology

Introduction and overview

125. At its 444th, 445th and 446th meetings, on 9 and 11 September 2002, the Committee on Conferences considered the report of the Secretary-General on pattern of conferences (A/57/228), paragraphs 118 to 139, on information technology, and the report of the Secretary-General on improving the performance of the Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services (A/57/289), paragraphs 41 to 48, on optimizing the use of technology.

126. The major changes that had come about since 2001 in information technology involved, first and foremost, a new policy approach that put information technology in the forefront. A policy decision had been made to move towards complete electronic processing of information. In that context, an important new project was the introduction of the digital recording system to replace dictaphones. Since the Information

Management and Technology Unit had become essential to the progress of the Department, it was to be transferred from the Executive Office to the Office of the Under-Secretary-General for General Assembly and Conference Management and its functions would be broadened to cover a full range of information and communications technology services.

Discussion

127. The Committee emphasized that it was essential for the Organization to keep abreast of cutting-edge technology. Information technology in particular would have an impact on global management.

128. In response to concerns expressed, the Secretariat reassured the Committee that all the projects of the Department were part of the overall information technology plan of the Organization, thus avoiding fragmentation of the process. Some technology projects would be implemented within the context of the capital master plan, although it might be found advisable to move the schedule for some projects forward.

129. Regarding the timing of some changes, it was explained that the new format of the Journal with electronic links appeared on the first day of the fifty-seventh session of the General Assembly and the technology would eventually be extended to other duty stations.

130. In response to questions about the projected costs, it was explained that, on the basis of very rough estimates, the Department expected the proposals and projects described in the two reports to be cost-neutral overall, with some shifting of personnel and resources.

131. Questions were raised about the relative merits of the Documents Control and Productivity Monitoring System (DCPMS) used at the United Nations Office at Vienna and the e-DRITS system used in New York.

132. A number of delegations expressed satisfaction about the manifest improvement in the technical quality of videoconferencing and enthusiasm for its potential cost-saving applications. It was mentioned that the Secretary-General was to prepare a report on videoconferencing applicable to the Organization as a whole.

133. Interest was expressed in a cost analysis of a global database for interpreters, text processors and translators.

Conclusions and recommendations

134. The Committee stressed that information technology was essential in achieving integrated global management of conference services.

135. The Committee on Conferences welcomed the updated information contained in the report (A/57/228) on a number of information technology projects and requested the Secretariat to ensure the dovetailing of the Department's projects with the overall strategy of the Organization and their compatibility with the capital master plan. As the report of the Secretary-General on improving the performance of the Department (A/57/289) made clear, information technology projects were crucial to achieving the goal of servicing Member States more efficiently. The Committee underlined the need to give priority to projects that had the potential for improving department-wide productivity without sacrificing quality.

136. The Committee requested the Secretary-General to report in 2003 on the implementation of the information technology projects of the Department.

137. The Committee requested the Secretariat to study the relative merits of the document tracking systems currently in use in the different duty stations and the possibility of combining the best features of each.

138. The Committee also requested the Secretariat to make more extensive use of videoconferencing in meetings, in view of the improvements in the technology, in order to increase the contact between intergovernmental bodies and Secretariat officials posted away from Headquarters, while achieving cost savings.
