Chapter I

Organizational matters

A. Membership

1. In its resolution 43/222 B, the General Assembly decided to retain the Committee on Conferences as a permanent subsidiary organ. Pursuant to the provisions of that resolution, in 2008 the Committee was composed of the following Member States: Argentina, Austria, Belarus, Burundi, China, El Salvador, France, Germany, Grenada, Honduras, Japan, Kenya, Lesotho, Malaysia, Nigeria, the Philippines, the Russian Federation, Senegal, the Syrian Arab Republic, Tunisia and the United States of America.

B. Officers

2. At its organizational session for 2008, the Committee elected the following officers to serve in 2008:

Chairperson:

Patrick A. Chuasoto (Philippines)

Vice-Chairpersons:

Alejandro Torres Lepori (Argentina)

Barbara Kaudel (Austria)

Saidu Dodo (Nigeria)

Rapporteur:

Yury G. Yaroshevich (Belarus)

3. At the same session, the Committee agreed in principle that the Chairman would undertake informal consultations with a view to determining the composition of its Bureau in 2009.

C. Organization of work

4. At its organizational session (489th meeting), held on 7 April 2008, the Committee agreed to follow the guidelines adopted in 1994 and 1995 with regard to its consideration of intersessional departures from the approved calendar of conferences and to meet, as required, to review proposals affecting the schedule of conferences and meetings during sessions of the General Assembly.

5. Also at the organizational session on 7 April 2008, the Chairman proposed to hold an additional meeting in order for the Committee to review the proposed strategic framework for the period 2010-2011 in its capacity as the oversight body for programme 1, General Assembly and Economic and Social Council affairs and conference management. At the 490th meeting, held on 29 April 2008, the Committee reviewed the proposed strategic framework (A/63/6 (Prog. 1)). The recommendations of the Committee were transmitted in a letter from the Chairman of the Committee on Conferences to the Chairman of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on 6 May 2008 and published in a conference room paper entitled "Proposed strategic framework for the period 2010-2011, Review of part two:

biennial programme plan by sectoral, functional and regional bodies” (E/AC.51/2008/CRP.1).

6. The Committee convened its substantive session from 8 to 12 September 2008 (491st to 496th meetings).

7. Representatives of the Secretariat addressed the Committee at its organizational session. The Under-Secretary-General for General Assembly and Conference Management addressed the Committee at the opening of its organizational and substantive sessions. At the substantive session, he introduced the report of the Secretary-General on pattern of conferences (A/63/119 and Add.1).

D. Programme of work

8. At its organizational session for 2007, held on 12 April 2007, the Committee requested the Secretariat to submit a draft agenda for 2008 to the Committee at its organizational session for 2008. At its 489th meeting, on 7 April 2008, the Committee adopted the proposed agenda (A/AC.172/2008/1) and requested the Secretariat to submit a draft agenda for 2009 to the Committee at its organizational session for 2009.

E. Participation of observers

9. The following States were represented as observers: Costa Rica, Cuba, Iran (Islamic Republic of), Mexico, Portugal and Singapore.

Chapter II

Calendar of conferences and meetings

A. Requests for exceptions to section I, paragraph 7, of General Assembly resolution 40/243

10. At its 491st meeting, on 8 September 2008, the Committee on Conferences considered the section of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences (A/63/119, chap. IV, sect. A, annex IV) containing requests for exceptions to section I, paragraph 7, of General Assembly resolution 40/243, by which the Assembly had decided that no subsidiary organ of the Assembly might meet at United Nations Headquarters during a regular session of the Assembly unless explicitly authorized by the Assembly.

Conclusions and recommendations

11. The Committee on Conferences recommended that the General Assembly explicitly authorize the following bodies to meet in New York during the main part of its sixty-third session, on the understanding that all such meetings would be allocated conference services on an “as available” basis, in such a way that the work of the Assembly and its Main Committees would not be impeded:

- (a) Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People;
- (b) Committee on Relations with the Host Country;
- (c) Disarmament Commission;
- (d) Executive Board of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women;
- (e) Independent Audit Advisory Committee;
- (f) Executive Board of the United Nations Children’s Fund;
- (g) Working Group on the Financing of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East.

B. Adoption of the draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings for 2009

12. At its 491st and 494th meetings, on 8 and 10 September 2008, the Committee reviewed the draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings for 2009 (A/63/119/Add.1), reflecting the changes for the second year of the biennium since the adoption of the biennial calendar.

Discussion

13. Clarification was requested as to the meaning of the term “to be determined” in the revised calendar of conferences. In addition, specific dates had been given for the resumed sessions of the Fifth Committee in the early part of the year, but not for the later sessions.

14. A representative of the Secretariat, referring to the heading “to be determined”, said that the bodies in question were entitled to services in all six official languages, but some of those meetings were seminars to be held in a particular region. The actual coverage required would be determined when the venue was determined. With regard to the Fifth Committee, its practice was to hold two resumed sessions after the main part of the General Assembly session. The specific dates of the second resumed session would be established based on the progress made during the first resumed session.

15. A delegation requested to clarify how conference services were to be provided to the meetings of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee. It was indicated that the meetings of the Committee, which was mandated to hold up to four sessions annually by General Assembly resolution 61/275, were to be serviced on an “as available” basis in 2008.

16. A representative of the Secretariat explained that although periodicity was established by the mandating resolution, language requirements for interpretation were clarified only after the membership of the Committee was established. Four sessions of the Committee have been included in the draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings for 2009, and conference services will be provided for those meetings on dates agreed upon between the secretariat of the Committee and meetings planners.

Chapter III

Meetings management/improved utilization of conference-servicing resources and facilities

A. Matters related to and intersessional departures from the approved calendar for 2008

17. The General Assembly, in its resolution 62/225, approved the draft biennial calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations for 2008 and 2009 as submitted by the Committee on Conferences, and authorized the Committee to make any adjustments that might become necessary as a result of actions and decisions taken by the Assembly at its sixty-second session. The calendar was issued as document A/AC.172/2008/2 and Corr.1.

18. At its 373rd meeting, on 26 August 1994, the Committee had decided that, in future, requests for intersessional departures submitted to the Committee should be reviewed by the Bureau, in consultation with the Secretariat, for subsequent action.

19. At its 379th meeting, on 23 March 1995, the Committee had agreed that proposed changes to the calendar that did not have programme budget implications could be dealt with by the Secretariat, in consultation with the Bureau of the Committee.

20. At its substantive session of 1995, the Committee had decided that requests for intersessional departures submitted to the Committee that involved a change of venue should be referred to the members for approval. Departures that involved other types of changes, as decided upon by the Committee at its substantive session of 1994, should be reviewed by the Bureau, in consultation with the Secretariat, for subsequent action.

21. Requests submitted in 2008, and one request submitted in 2007, for changes of venue or additional sessions/meetings and the action taken by the Committee are set out below.

Organ	Request	Action taken
Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations	To convene one additional meeting in June 2008 in order to conclude its 2008 resumed session. Conference services to be provided on an "as available" basis.	Request approved
Fifth Committee	To extend the second part of its resumed session by one week, to 6 June 2008. Conference services were to be provided from those reserved for the General Assembly and would be serviced within existing resources.	Request approved

Organ	Request	Action taken
Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters	To convene the fiftieth session of the Board at Geneva from 9 to 11 July 2008 rather than in New York so as to give members the opportunity to confer with participants in the Conference on Disarmament. Since the Board also serves as the Board of Trustees of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research, the Geneva venue enables the Board members to be in close contact with the staff of the Institute.	Request approved
Commission for Social Development	To hold one additional meeting in order to conclude the work of its forty-sixth session, held from 6 to 15 February 2008. Conference services to be provided on an "as available" basis in consultation with Conference Services.	Request approved
Commission on the Status of Women	To hold one additional meeting in order to finish the work of its fifty-second session, held from 25 February to 7 March 2008. Conference services to be provided on an "as available" basis in consultation with Conference Services.	Request approved
UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board	To convene one additional formal meeting in order to complete the work of its second regular session. Conference services to be provided on an "as available" basis and without any adverse effects on the work of the General Assembly and its Main Committees.	Request approved
Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification	To convene an extraordinary session in New York on 26 November 2007, in order to conclude consideration of item 6 of the agenda of its eighth session, Programme and budget, and to adopt by consensus its core budget. Conference services and facilities to be provided from within existing resources and without any adverse effects on the work of the General Assembly and its Main Committees.	Request approved

B. Meeting statistics of United Nations organs and consultations with/letters to bodies concerning utilization of conference services available to them

Introduction and overview

22. At its 491st meeting, on 8 September, the Committee considered the section of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences containing statistical data and analysis of the planned and actual utilization of conference resources allocated to a core sample of bodies that met in New York, Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi in 2007 (A/63/119, paras. 27-41 and annex I). The overall utilization factor at the four duty stations had remained at 83 per cent, the same level as that reported the previous year and above the established benchmark of 80 per cent.

23. The Committee also heard an oral report by the Chairperson on his consultations with five intergovernmental bodies that had utilized less than the applicable benchmark percentage of their allocated resources during the period from 2005 to 2007. As in previous years, the consultations had been designed to assist the bodies concerned to make efficient use of their conference-servicing resources while ensuring that their substantive work was completed successfully.

24. A number of suggestions for improvement had been made during the consultations, including providing advance notice of cancellations; beginning meetings on time, even without a quorum; scheduling shorter meetings if it was anticipated that less time would be required; using any time remaining at the end of the meeting to discuss additional agenda items; releasing unused interpretation services to meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States; and reducing the number of meetings initially requested to accurately reflect the actual expected demand for conference services without changing the actual entitlements to such services.

25. Late starts and early endings had a particularly negative impact on the utilization factors of a number of intergovernmental bodies, but their impact could be minimized by reinforcing the need for discipline. During the consultations, it had been pointed out that adding “back-up” items to the agendas of certain meetings might undermine the established working methods of the bodies concerned because their programmes of work were based on the availability of high-level speakers and representatives from outside New York whose travel arrangements were fixed. Nevertheless, the bureaux and secretariats concerned had responded positively to the Chairperson’s proposal that meeting planners be advised at least one day in advance when it was expected that meetings would end early, thereby making it possible to reassign interpretation services to other meetings. That strategy would be pursued during the sixty-third session of the General Assembly. Efforts would also be made to cooperate closely with meeting planners, as well as to give advance notice of cancellations.

26. At the same meeting, the Committee also considered the section of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences concerning the provision of interpretation services to meetings of “as required” bodies (A/63/119, paras. 42-47 and annex II).

Discussion

27. Support was expressed for the ongoing efforts to optimize the use of conference services and, in particular, for the adoption of new and innovative mechanisms to increase the capacity of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management to deal with unanticipated meeting requests. Additional information was requested on the specific measures taken by the Secretariat to deal with persistent underutilizers, and one delegation wished to know what portion of the unit costs for one meeting with services was discretionary.

28. A representative of the Secretariat explained that the unit costs set out in annex VI to the report related only to conference-servicing functions; the costs of using the meeting room were not included. The Department dealt with all underutilizers in the same proactive fashion, making specific recommendations for improvement. Rather than focusing on the difficult issue of late starts and early endings, it tried to stress the importance of careful planning and the need to reallocate unused resources to other bodies.

29. Some delegations expressed serious concern about the use of the United Nations premises by a few States for activities that neither maintained the respect for the dignity of the Organization nor were in line with the purposes and principles of the United Nations. Delegations stressed that the issue required particular attention since it had created the perception of possible misuse of the premises.

30. Referring to meetings of “as required” bodies, several delegations enquired about the specific entitlements of those bodies and about the relationship between the servicing of those meetings and the servicing of meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States. It appeared contradictory to suggest that as a result of an increase in the number of meeting requests and the consequent strengthening of the strategic reserve for meetings of “as required” bodies, the ability of the Department to provide interpretation services to regional and other major groupings had been enhanced.

31. A representative of the Secretariat explained that, in general, the meeting entitlements of “as required” bodies, which included open-ended working groups of the General Assembly and the Security Council, were determined when the bodies themselves were established and were set out in either a statement of conference-servicing implications or a statement of programme budget implications. The Department had an obligation to service all such meetings. Although the increased strategic reserve put in place at Headquarters had resulted in an improvement in the provision of services to “as required” bodies, it was still sometimes inadequate, particularly at peak periods, when several such bodies tended to meet in parallel. However, when such bodies cancelled meetings or reduced the number of meetings requested, any unused capacity was redeployed to other meetings. A delegation enquired what was meant by “peak period” and whether it referred to the regular session of the General Assembly. A representative of the Secretariat explained that the peak period was from March to May, when the programme of meetings was particularly heavy. The Department would continue to monitor the situation with a view to determining whether it would be necessary to increase the strategic reserve further during the next biennium.

32. In response to a question about the prioritization of meeting requests, a representative of the Secretariat explained that requests were prioritized according to the status of the requesting body and the nature of the meeting requested. Plenary meetings took precedence over informal consultations, for instance, but when a number of bodies with equal priority requested meetings at the same time, a first-come, first-served approach tended to be adopted.

C. Provision of interpretation services to meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States

Introduction and overview

33. At its 491st meeting, on 8 September, the Committee considered the section of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences concerning the provision of interpretation services to meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States (A/63/119, paras. 48-53 and annex III).

Discussion

34. While one delegation expressed concern about the apparently causal relationship between the increased strategic reserve and the increase in the percentage of meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States that were provided with interpretation services, another pointed out that the availability of additional capacity to service the meetings of such groups was merely an unintended, albeit welcome, by-product of a strengthened strategic reserve.

35. A representative of the Secretariat explained that the Department had increased the strategic reserve in the knowledge that any unused capacity would be reallocated to meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States. However, no resources, either human or financial, were specifically earmarked for such meetings, since they were serviced entirely from unused resources reallocated from meetings of "as required" bodies. The recent increase in the percentage of meetings held by such groups that had been provided with interpretation services was attributable to a combination of effective planning and the holding of ongoing consultations with the groups.

D. Improved utilization of conference facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi

Introduction and overview

36. At its 491st meeting, on 8 September, the Committee considered the section of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences concerning the improved utilization of conference facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi (A/63/119, paras. 54-55).

Discussion

37. Delegations expressed their satisfaction at the significant progress made by the United Nations Office at Nairobi and expressed the hope that the positive trend would continue. It was suggested that a more aggressive marketing strategy should be adopted in order to encourage additional clients to use the Nairobi conference facilities.

38. Responding to a question about the differences in the cost of holding one meeting with interpretation in six languages and support services in New York versus Nairobi, a representative of the Secretariat explained that the costing components for meetings and documentation services included elements relating to the standard salary cost for both permanent and freelance staff, as well as elements relating to the travel and terminal expenses and daily subsistence allowance of non-local temporary assistance.

E. Improved utilization of the conference centre at the Economic Commission for Africa

Introduction and overview

39. At its 491st meeting, on 8 September, the Committee considered the section of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences concerning the conference centre at the Economic Commission for Africa (A/63/119, paras. 56-58).

Discussion

40. Delegations expressed satisfaction at the significant improvement in the rate of utilization of the conference centre at the Economic Commission for Africa and expressed hope that the positive trend would continue.

41. In response to a request for clarification, a representative of the Secretariat explained that the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management was not involved in the management of the conference centre because section 2 of the regular budget covered only the four main duty stations.

Chapter IV

Impact of the capital master plan, accelerated strategy IV, on meetings held at Headquarters and other issues during its implementation

Introduction and overview

42. At its 492nd meeting, on 8 September 2008, the Committee on Conferences considered the section of the report of the Secretary-General on pattern of conferences concerning the impact on meetings held at Headquarters during the implementation of the capital master plan, strategy IV (phased approach) (A/63/119, paras. 59-65). The accelerated strategy for the implementation of the capital master plan would shorten the overall time needed for the renovation but, in so doing, would increase the potential for disruption. While sufficient conference facilities would be available to accommodate all core activities of the intergovernmental bodies normally meeting at Headquarters, on a temporary basis fewer facilities would be available for parallel meetings sometimes held by calendar bodies outside of their mandated entitlement, as well as side events that are customarily organized alongside calendar meetings. The staff of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management would be scattered across five separate locations and current provisions for the accommodation of temporary staff were inadequate. That situation could affect the Department's ability to deliver all mandated outputs in a timely fashion at times of peak demand.

43. A related and as yet unresolved issue was the additional staffing needs for information technology support services, which would be expected to ensure that over a dozen mission-critical systems in multiple locations performed as required throughout the renovation process. In that connection, the Committee was urged to impress upon the General Assembly the need for sufficient numbers of permanent Professional staff for the Information and Communications Technology Section during the upcoming critical period.

Discussion

44. Delegations stressed that the implementation of the accelerated capital master plan must not have any negative impact on the quality and availability of conference services or the equal treatment and working conditions of language services in all six official languages. Concern was expressed regarding the fire doors and barriers which had been installed in the General Assembly Building and the Secretariat Building without consulting Member States. This did not appear to be a rational use of resources given the imminent launch of the plan's construction phase. Several delegations asked whether those doors were in compliance with the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, as they made entry and exit from conference rooms and common areas of the buildings more difficult. Concern was also expressed that the "Cool United Nations" initiative, aimed at contributing to global efforts to combat climate change by reducing the carbon footprint of United Nations Headquarters, appeared to present measures affecting the working conditions not only of the Secretariat, but of Member States as well. In that connection, it was underlined that measures relating to the utilization of conference facilities, regardless of their essence and potential benefits, should be duly discussed and decided upon in the appropriate intergovernmental bodies, namely the Committee on Conferences and the Fifth Committee.

45. Members of the Committee also wished to know: (a) if the 750 staff of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management scheduled to move to the Albano Building at 305 East 46th Street represented the entire staff of the Department; (b) the projected date of transfer to the swing space; and (c) the criteria applied in determining which meetings were included in the category of core activities. More detailed information was also requested on the financial implications for conference services of associated costs of the capital master plan.

46. In response, a representative of the Capital Master Plan Office said that the decision to install the fire doors had been taken by the Department of Management and the Department of Safety and Security in consultation with the host country authorities, not by the Office. The purpose of the doors was to provide containment in the event of a fire, since neither the Secretariat nor the General Assembly Buildings currently had a sprinkler system. Although lacking in aesthetic appeal and not user-friendly, the doors met the accessibility standards established in the Americans with Disabilities Act.

47. The Secretary-General had instituted the “Cool United Nations” initiative not as a cost-saving measure, but to lead by example in the effort to combat climate change.

48. The 750 staff members moving to the Albano Building represented the entire documentation chain, from submission through text processing. The move was currently scheduled for the first quarter of 2009. Other Department staff would be located in the DC-1 and DC-2 Buildings, the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) Building and at other locations within the United Nations campus during the construction phase. The most complete list of core activities available was the calendar of conferences. Delegations were informed that it might not be possible to accommodate all side events and parallel activities surrounding the meetings listed therein. It was possible that, by limiting side events, space could be made available for meetings of regional groups.

Chapter V

Integrated global management

Introduction and overview

49. At its 492nd and 495th meetings, on 8 and 10 September, the Committee on Conferences considered the section of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences concerning integrated global management (A/63/119, paras. 7-12). Within the framework of integrated global management, efforts to standardize working methods and enhance integration and resource-sharing were ongoing. The Department for General Assembly and Conference Management was also continuing to move forward with the implementation of the global information technology initiative, which had been endorsed by Member States, comprising three projects: a global reporting data warehouse (project 1), a global solution for planning and servicing of meetings (project 2) and a global solution for documentation planning and processing (project 3). Progress was monitored regularly by means of videoconferences and shared electronic workspaces. The Department planned to conduct an internal evaluation of the entire integrated global management exercise in late 2009 to determine its benefits to the Department, Member States and duty stations and expected to report on lessons learned, taking local specificities into account, to the Committee on Conferences at its substantive session of 2009.

Discussion

50. The view was expressed that the purpose of integrated global management was to ensure a balanced division of labour between Headquarters and other duty stations, with the goal of increasing the quality of interpretation and translation in all official languages and at all duty stations. In harmonizing methods of work, care must be taken to respect the unique aspects of each duty station and language group and to observe the principle of equal grade for equal work. All integrated global management initiatives must comply with resolutions of the General Assembly and other applicable mandates. Cost savings were another expected benefit of the initiative; the Committee would look forward to receiving information on the savings realized from the streamlining and harmonization of processes.

51. In reply to a request from delegations for clarification regarding lateral transfers of staff between duty stations, a representative of the Secretariat said that in 2002, the Under-Secretary-General for General Assembly and Conference Management had been given the authority to transfer staff among the four main duty stations, namely, New York, Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi, in view of the need for experienced staff and that that authority had been extended to the regional commissions in 2004. At the departmental coordination meeting held in June 2008, it was noted that New York was no longer an attractive posting for language staff and that a significant migration towards Geneva and Vienna was taking place. The effective management of lateral transfers of staff between the duty stations and the regional commissions through internal vacancy announcements along with an accelerated schedule of competitive language examinations were two measures suggested to avoid destabilizing the staffing tables of any particular duty station.

52. In response to a question regarding cooperation between Headquarters and the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) through the assignment of a senior reviser to ECA in exchange for a translator at the P-3 level, a representative of the Secretariat said that the integrated global management project did not formally extend to the regional commissions, but as all the commissions had conference-servicing units, it made sense to coordinate activities both formally and informally. The staff exchange with ECA served the purpose of providing training for Headquarters staff through exposure to the conditions and issues pertinent to Africa, and for ECA staff through exposure to information technology systems and working methods that could be useful in their work. The regional commissions, which did not have dedicated support for terminology research as did New York and Geneva, had also begun to coordinate with the main duty stations in that area. In recognition of the fact that the market for the outsourcing of translation was global rather than local, New York, Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi were using a common roster for contractual translation on a pilot basis. The roster included access to quality control evaluations of the work of contractors. A detailed report on that experience would be presented at the 2009 substantive session. In reply to a request for clarification regarding common rosters, a representative of the Secretariat explained that the Department maintained three types of rosters. The first type was established on the basis of the results of competitive examinations for recruitment to permanent language posts and was used by all duty stations and the regional commissions; the second was the common roster for contractual translation; and the third was a roster for the recruitment of short-term staff under the 300 series of the Staff Rules that was specific to both the language and the duty station, drawing mainly on the local freelance market for reasons of cost-effectiveness. The Office of Internal Oversight Services and the Board of Auditors had suggested that the rosters of short-term staff should be common as well. That would be feasible, but it remained unclear whether any value would be added by adopting that approach.

Chapter VI

Documentation and publication-related matters

Introduction and overview

53. At its 492nd and 495th meetings, on 8 and 10 September, the Committee considered the section of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences concerning documents management (A/63/119, paras. 66-90 and annex V). Introducing the report, the Under-Secretary-General for General Assembly and Conference Management informed the Committee that the adoption of more robust document planning rules at Headquarters had, for the most part, led to improvements in the timely submission of documentation and increased compliance with page limits. There was, however, scope for further improvement. The Department therefore continued to impress upon all concerned the need for an orderly document production workflow.

Discussion

54. While acknowledging the challenges facing the Department in the area of documents management, several delegations expressed serious concern about the persistently late submission, processing and issuance of documents in all six official languages. Particular reference was made to the problems that had dogged the Fifth Committee during the second part of the resumed session, when the late issuance of a significant volume of documentation had had extremely adverse effects on its substantive work. There was general agreement on the need to take the steps necessary to prevent the recurrence of that situation.

55. A number of delegations raised the issue of accountability and, in that connection, enquired as to the measures taken to raise author departments' awareness of the need for timely submission. More detailed information and statistics on the reasons for author departments' failure to comply with submission deadlines were requested, and it was suggested that sanctions should be imposed on managers responsible for the late submission of documents. Further clarification of the slotting system and of the criteria used to prioritize the various types of document was also requested.

56. Representatives of the Secretariat pointed out that the various measures implemented to encourage author departments to submit documents on time, which included an aggressive reminder system, the "naming and shaming" of persistent offenders in the Secretary-General's report on the pattern of conferences and ongoing consultations with the departments concerned, had borne fruit: during the reporting period, the majority of author departments had reached or exceeded the 90 per cent compliance target set out in the Secretary-General's compact with the Under-Secretary-General. The reasons for late submission cited by author departments included the delayed availability of information to be included in the report in question and the failure to conclude the relevant consultations within the original time frame.

57. Once documents reached the Department, they were almost always processed within the established time limits. Linear document processing, while most effective, was frequently impossible owing to the unpredictable nature of the demand for documents as well as the unpredictable length and quality of such documents. As a general rule, in-session documentation, reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and draft resolutions received priority treatment and, where necessary and as mandated by the General Assembly, Fifth Committee documents were processed on a rush basis, albeit at a higher cost. Any adjustments to processing schedules were made in consultation with the secretariats of the bodies concerned. In order to address the specific problems affecting the timely submission of Fifth Committee documentation, the Secretariat intended to hold annual planning meetings for the departments concerned with a view to agreeing on appropriate timelines for the preparation and approval of the documents at issue.

58. Representatives of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations and the Department of Management emphasized that the late submission of various Fifth Committee documents during the second part of the resumed session had been due to exceptional circumstances that were unlikely to recur. They also gave an overview of the measures being implemented to streamline and improve the budget preparation process with a view to ensuring that, in future, all relevant documents were submitted on time. Those measures included providing in situ support to missions during the drafting process and adopting a staggered approach to the submission of documentation.

59. It was suggested that the time taken to translate documents into all six official languages might be one factor delaying the issuance of such documents. In response, a representative of the Secretariat pointed out that the workload standard for translators, which currently stood at five pages per day, had been developed as a planning tool rather than as a performance measure. Many translators regularly exceeded that standard.

Chapter VII

Translation and interpretation-related matters

Introduction and overview

60. At its 493rd, 494th and 495th meetings, on 9 and 10 September, the Committee considered section VI of the report of the Secretary-General on pattern of conferences, concerning translation and interpretation-related matters (see A/63/119, “Demographic transition in the language services” (paras. 91-95), “Contractual translation and quality control” (paras. 96-100), “Impact of freelance recruitment on quality of interpretation at all duty stations” (paras. 101-105) and “Current and future vacancies at the United Nations Office at Nairobi” (paras. 106-108)). In introducing the report, the Under-Secretary-General for General Assembly and Conference Management said that the continuing exodus from Headquarters of competent and experienced language staff remained a cause for concern. The insufficient capacity of the Office of Human Resources Management to carry out the necessary recruitment processes in a timely manner was particularly worrying, especially given the fact that, once hired, new recruits required extensive coaching and training before they could be expected to function as replacements for staff who were retiring. The ongoing demographic transition within the Department could jeopardize the quality of services on which Member States relied. Accordingly, a number of steps were being taken to address the situation. Additional competitive examinations were being scheduled and an outreach programme geared towards universities had been developed. A number of memorandums of understanding had already been concluded with universities training potential language professionals. The addition of a departmental training coordinator had greatly facilitated the training and outreach programme, and those efforts would soon begin to bear fruit.

61. The shortage of qualified interpreters would have an adverse effect on the servicing of the Follow-up International Conference on Financing for Development to Review the Implementation of the Monterrey Consensus, to be held in Qatar in November 2008, which overlapped with the United Nations Climate Change Conference to be held in Poland in early December 2008 and the final weeks of the main part of the sixty-third session of the General Assembly at Headquarters in New York. In order to address that issue, the Under-Secretary-General of the Department asked the Committee to request the General Assembly to grant a temporary waiver of the ceiling on United Nations earnings for retirees for the duration of the sixty-third session. A permanent increase of that ceiling would provide a more sustainable solution to the problem, but a more structural solution would be an extension of the retirement age to 65.

62. Representatives of conference services at the United Nations Offices at Geneva, Nairobi and Vienna participated via videoconference in the 494th meeting of the Committee and discussed the theme of strategic workforce planning, focusing on outreach and training. A non-paper on that theme was distributed to members.

Geneva

63. The Director of the Division of Conference Management at the United Nations Office at Geneva emphasized the urgent need for concrete measures to address the difficulties caused by the ongoing demographic transition. While the Division had already participated in a number of outreach activities, including playing host to the forum of the International Permanent Conference of University Institutes of Translators and Interpreters, the ever-increasing demands placed on translators and interpreters often meant that they were unable to avail themselves of useful training opportunities or to share their professional expertise with educational institutions in the context of the outreach programme. In the absence of additional resources, that situation looked set to continue.

64. The most pressing challenges currently facing the Division were connected with the exponential and ongoing increase in the servicing requirements of the Human Rights Council and its subsidiary bodies. In particular, the documentation requirements associated with the universal periodic review mechanism were placing an enormous strain on the Division's resources. Translators and revisers were working under pressure to process documents, many of which were submitted late and in the wrong format; that situation had resulted in a further increase in the backlog of summary records. In that regard, it might be appropriate to consider, as part of the outreach and training programme, hiring university students to translate summary records under the supervision of staff revisers.

Nairobi

65. The Chief of the Division of Conference Services in Nairobi drew attention to the acute difficulties facing that duty station in the area of recruiting and retaining high-level language professionals. The shortage of such professionals at the global level, combined with a declining interest in postings to Nairobi, had exacerbated an already serious problem. It was therefore essential to increase the attractiveness of the duty station by, inter alia, adding a number of higher-level language posts. By offering 11-month contracts to translators and interpreters who had not yet passed the relevant competitive examinations, the Division was hoping to groom prospective new recruits and encourage them to stay in Nairobi. That exercise was limited in scope, however, owing to the need to ensure the highest standards of quality. In the longer term, the "Africa project", described in the non-paper circulated to Committee members, was designed to establish contacts with educational establishments in Africa with a view to developing training programmes for language professionals, thereby contributing to the strengthening of Africa's conference-servicing capacity. The ultimate aim of the project was to provide an adequate pool of highly competent university-trained language professionals capable of delivering quality language services to both local and international organizations.

Vienna

66. The Chief of the Conference Management Service at the United Nations Office at Vienna said that outreach included activities directed both outside the Secretariat and the United Nations system and within the Secretariat, as staff already on board provided a pool of potential additions to conference services in many job categories. He viewed the current staffing situation as a result of many factors, including the lack of interest among young people, especially with English as a mother tongue, in pursuing language professions, and the demand for language skills as a useful asset in other types of jobs, which limited the pool of potential recruits. In addition, many successful candidates in language examinations also lost to the system because of the slow recruitment process.

67. The Department should ask itself if its recruitment criteria should be adjusted to take into account current realities. As an intermediate arrangement, a bridge between unpaid internship and permanent or freelance employment could be created through the establishment of a traineeship programme in order to enlarge the pool of potential recruits. Some universities, especially in the English-speaking world, included in their curriculums such a period of “industrial attachment” for their students, and the United Nations could explore the possibility of becoming a receiving institution. The Organization could offer 11-month contracts to trainees with the potential to pass the competitive examinations. A relaxation of the rules governing internships could also be considered in order to attract more candidates. The model of the interpretation and translation training programmes formerly carried out in Moscow and Beijing could be followed, targeting specific language groups under a joint agreement between the United Nations and a Government or educational institution.

68. The Department could take the lead, in collaboration with the Office of Human Resources Management, in developing new concepts of workforce management. As an interim measure, testing and recruitment of language staff could be decentralized to allow duty stations to be given the authority to certify staff after a certain period of successful service on cumulative short-term contracts, perhaps two years. Such candidates could be given two-year fixed-term contracts in lieu of passing the competitive examination. The requirement of a second official language as a qualification for sitting the examination could be relaxed or dropped altogether, thus increasing the eligible pool of professionals.

69. In the area of external outreach, Vienna had made contacts with more than a dozen universities over the past two years. Internal outreach activities included specialized training on such subjects as trade law or outer space for translators and other conference-servicing staff, library and linguistic support to all the Vienna-based organizations and calls for volunteers to staff outside the Department to service large conferences and meetings along with core staff to provide them with exposure to its work. Many such volunteers had expressed interest in joining the Department in the future.

Discussion

Geneva

70. Committee members expressed concern about the situation at the United Nations Office at Geneva. Some delegations, however, pointed out that a number of additional interpreter, translator and reviser posts had recently been established in Geneva. In response to questions regarding the impact of that extra capacity, the Committee was told that the Division of Conference Management was expected to service all meetings of the Human Rights Council and its associated bodies, including the three annual sessions of the universal periodic review mechanism, from within existing resources. The additional language posts referred to by delegations, many of which had not yet been filled, had been offset by reductions in other areas of the Division or were intended to be used for monitoring the quality of contractual translation. Accordingly, the Division had been forced to neglect its other clients in order to meet its obligations to the Human Rights Council. A longer-term solution to the problem was needed, and so a joint task force, comprising representatives of the Division and representatives of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), had been established. The report of the task force, which contained a detailed statistical analysis of the situation and recommendations for remedial measures, would shortly be submitted to the Human Rights Council.

71. The view was expressed that additional documents processing capacity would not solve the problem of late submission described in paragraph 71 of the report on the pattern of conferences. However, one delegation reiterated its support for the allocation of additional resources to ensure the servicing of the universal periodic review mechanism. On the issue of temporary assistance, concerns were expressed about the apparent difficulty of recruiting competent freelance interpreters in Geneva. It was noted in response that, while the Geneva freelance market was buoyant, the United Nations was in competition with other Geneva-based organizations and European institutions for the services of freelancers. It was particularly difficult to obtain additional capacity at short notice.

72. In answer to a query about the depletion of the rosters, the representative of the Division of Conference Management agreed that the situation was critical. Resources were needed for additional competitive examinations, since recent examinations had not yielded the expected number of successful candidates. Unforeseen events, such as the refusal of employment offers by potential recruits, further complicated matters.

Nairobi

73. Committee members expressed concern about the staffing situation at the United Nations Office at Nairobi and requested more detailed information on the reasons for that duty station's apparent unpopularity. In response, it was pointed out that Nairobi was classified as a hardship duty station (category C). Despite the financial advantages of accepting a post in Kenya, many potential recruits did not wish to subject either themselves or their families to the sometimes difficult living conditions.

74. Responding to a query regarding the comparatively high unit cost of a meeting with interpretation in Nairobi, the representative of the Division of Conference Services clarified that, given the acute shortage of local temporary assistance, the additional costs were attributable to the travel expenses and daily subsistence allowance of internationally recruited interpreters. It was hoped that the Africa project, for which there was overwhelming support in Africa and beyond, would eventually increase the pool of local freelancers, thereby reducing the need to hire internationally. One delegation expressed concern about the uneven quality of freelance interpreters; it was pointed out that the use of interpreters affiliated with the International Association of Conference Interpreters (AIIC) served as a guarantee of quality.

Vienna

75. Interest was expressed in the proposal to establish a traineeship programme, which would be modelled on similar programmes in use in the institutions of the European Union. In reply to a question about quality control of contractual translation, it was reported that the Office had come close to meeting its ambitious target of 35 per cent for outsourcing, which should be offset by more meaningful internal quality control. However, it still lacked dedicated resources for quality control in the form of P-5 senior revisers, and thus had been forced to improvise solutions by hiring short-term senior revisers or assigning those tasks to P-4 staff. The weaker performance of freelance staff in some interpretation booths mentioned in paragraph 104 of the report of the Secretary-General was a matter of concern, and it was suggested that Vienna might profit from the experience of Nairobi, where the overall quality was considered satisfactory. It was pointed out that the technical subject matter of many meetings held in Vienna was a factor, and that, although performance of freelance interpreters might be weaker than that of permanent staff, it still met established standards. The view was expressed that the exhaustion of rosters and the demographic transition could have been foreseen at an earlier point, before the situation reached crisis proportions.

General discussion

76. The Committee reaffirmed its support for efforts to maintain the highest standards of quality in both translation and interpretation. The German Translation Service at Headquarters was commended for the excellent services it provided to Member States. Dissatisfaction was expressed, however, with the quality of interpretation from Russian into English. The Committee also expressed support for outreach to universities and schools of translation in all regions, especially in Latin America and Arabic-speaking countries. It also welcomed efforts to work with the Examinations and Tests Section of the Office of Human Resources Management to hold more frequent competitive examinations in all official languages to replenish rosters for language posts.

77. The proposal to waive or raise the ceiling on United Nations earnings for retirees in translation and interpretation as a way to ease the staffing shortage during the demographic transition was a cause for concern to many delegations. It could potentially set a precedent and could be viewed as giving special treatment to certain occupational groups. Furthermore, the demographic transition had long been foreseen, and other methods such as a more frequent schedule of competitive examinations should have been taken earlier. Raising the earnings ceiling was seen as a stop-gap measure, while long-term solutions were needed and could be found through outreach and increased contacts with educational institutions.

78. A representative of the Secretariat said that many successful candidates now on the rosters did not wish to accept permanent employment, and that such human factors as resignations, deaths and staff moving to other departments were involved as well. The distinction between language staff and other staff in respect of the earnings ceiling for retirees had been introduced by the General Assembly itself many years earlier, in recognition of the fact that retirees were essential in order to maintain quality, and that it was in the interests of the Organization to provide a different ceiling for retired language staff. In 2003, by its resolution 57/305, the Assembly had abandoned the practice of expressing that ceiling in dollars and had instead set the ceiling at 125 workdays. Action by the Assembly would be required for any waiver of or change to the ceiling.

79. The Committee also expressed concern at the situation regarding the servicing of the Follow-up International Conference on Financing for Development in Qatar, which overlapped with the United Nations Climate Change Conference in Poland and the end of the main part of the sixty-third session of the General Assembly. The question was raised whether the use of retirees was the only solution to the problem, and whether the search for freelance interpreters on the international commercial market had been sufficiently thorough. A difference in interpretation of the legislative intent of the relevant resolution between the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management and the Office of Human Resources Management was noted; the Office of Human Resources Management took it to mean calendar days, which included weekends, while the Department interpreted it as working days. Some 15 retirees would have reached the ceiling before the conferences were involved; if agreement could be reached on that interpretation, most of them could be employed during that period of heavy demand. A representative of the Secretariat stressed that the necessary conference servicing would be provided to the two important conferences, but that no reserves would be available for unforeseen meetings at Headquarters during that period without the use of retirees. As for the commercial freelance market, it was not the current practice to hire interpreters who had not passed the freelance test because of the need to ensure a sufficient level of quality in their performance. Some Committee members suggested including specific language in the resolution requesting that emergency measures be considered in this regard so as to ensure that the meetings were provided with the mandated services. The Fifth Committee would therefore need to consider the resolution in October in order to ensure that timely action could be taken.
